A SPECIAL REPORT

THE LUTHERAN CHURCH  MISSOURI SYNOD

Counting our blessings—beginning with One

Do you recall God’s promises to Abram? “If a man could number the dust of the earth, then your descendants also could be numbered” (Gen. 13:16 NKJV) and “Count the stars if you are able to number them. ... So shall your descendants be.” Abraham believed in the Lord, and God accounted it to him for righteousness (Gen. 15:5–6 NKJV).

Surely, to Abram, the task of counting dust and stars appeared daunting and the promise unimaginable. Yet, he believed everything God had promised. He began this counting as only he could—with one. And Abraham called the name of his son—whom Sarah bore to him—Isaac (Gen. 21:3).

Likewise, we personally count the immeasurable promises and blessings of God by beginning with One—God’s only-begotten Son, Jesus Christ, who shed His blood for the forgiveness of sins. This forgiveness becomes ours in Baptism. One by one, He calls us by name, counting us among the descendants of Abraham.

As fellow believers of the promise, we count our blessings—individually and as His Church—beginning with one. “There is one body and one Spirit, just as you were called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism; one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all” (Eph. 4:4–6 NKJV).

We count it a blessing to share Christ’s love in One Mission—to win the world for Christ by reaching the lost—a mission we share with Jesus, who came to seek and to save people who are lost (Luke 19:10).

We are blessed with One Message—the greatest message in the world—the message of “Christ and Him crucified.”

As One People—living and acting as those who are blessed—we stand firm in one spirit, contending as one man for the faith of the Gospel (Phil. 1:27). Thanks be to God who blesses us through the Lord Jesus Christ!

This special report recounts the blessed work of our gracious Lord through the 6,150 congregations and 2,540,045 people who are The Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod. God pours out His grace in mission and ministry being done and yet to be done. While a glimpse toward heaven and earth reminds us these works under God’s promise are innumerable, we believe and take joy in what God has done.

We give glory to Father, Son and Holy Spirit, counting our blessings—beginning with One.

4 Congregations

6,150 congregations are the “front line” of mission and ministry. Here are examples of ministry and how they are assisted by the Synod.

16 World Mission

LCMS World Mission is spreading the Gospel of Jesus Christ in an effort to reach 100 million people by 2017.

10 Districts

35 districts support the work of congregations. Stories from three districts examine ways they are meeting today’s challenges.

22 Higher Education

10 colleges and two seminaries strive to prepare church workers and to educate lay leaders for Christian service in church and society.

12 World Relief/Human Care

5.8 million people were touched last year through agencies supported through LCMS World Relief/Human Care.

26 Funding the Mission

At $88.6 million, the Synod’s current budget reflects a trend toward direct giving from congregations and individuals.

28 LCMS Foundation

$55 million in gifts was provided to ministries last year, thanks to donors who worked through the LCMS Foundation.

32 LCEF

Last year, 435 LCEF loans provided "space and place" for ministry in congregations, schools and agencies within the Synod.

36 Worker Benefit Plans

Health, disability and retirement coverage for 31,000 church workers and their families is provided through Worker Benefit Plans.

40 Concordia Publishing House

For 133 years, Concordia Publishing House has produced materials faithful to Scripture and the Lutheran Confessions.

42 One Savior

Jesus Christ, who is the one Savior of the world, gives meaning to our work together in the Synod.

On the Cover

Together, the people of The Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod carry out one mission and proclaim one message...centering on the cross of our one Savior, Jesus Christ.

Lord of Life Lutheran Church, Westfield, Ind., welcomed 101 new members during worship in late November. The congregation is one of four “daughtered” by Carmel Lutheran Church, Carmel, Ind., during its 27-year history.

Congregations

Joined in one mission, with one message, as one people

Stories of mission and ministry are as diverse as the 2,540,045 baptized members of the 6,150 congregations that voluntarily choose to belong to The Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod. Surprisingly, they could be told in more than 20 languages—a testimony to current immigration and outreach—in this church body that was organized 150 years ago by congregations populated by German immigrants.

This is a community bound by a confession of belief that Jesus Christ, through His suffering and death, has reconciled us to the Almighty God. This good news—the Gospel—unites us in the mission to make disciples and share this message of eternal life in Christ by working together as one people.

Congregations are the heart of the Synod, and the stories here illustrate their commitment to mission and ministry in the name of Jesus Christ.

tions wanted fewer programs and more direct contact and assistance from the national and district offices of the Synod.

“District staff struggle with the same questions,” Wilke observes. He sees district staffs becoming more diverse as they also refine their work. “We have to find a balance between developing appropriate resources—not just programs—whether these are Bible studies or how-to materials,” Wilke said.

“I don’t want to send a message that 6,150 congregations are not important; we will respond as appropriate or refer them to their district office,” Wilke said. “We have a system established and it’s called districts. We want to focus on strengthening relationships and partnership with district offices.”

District and Congregational Services has six ministry areas: child, family, outreach, school, stewardship and youth ministries.

Wilke added that DCS will continue to provide valued resources such as the national Youth Gathering and resources for Lutheran schools.

Trinity nurtures leaders from early ages

As the Synod recruits church workers, it can look to the recipe used by Trinity Lutheran Church in Mobile, Ala.

“We nurture young people from an early age, even in confirmation class or before,” says Pastor Ulmer Marshall. “When you see young people with the gifts or abilities for ministry, or you see young people who are leaning that way, you want to help them think about the ministry.”

Marshall has served Trinity since 1973, leading the 51-year-old congregation as it grew from weekly worship attendance of 30 to more than 250. During that time, five of its sons have entered the pastoral ministry in the Synod.

“If I count all the others who have come

The deep brown eyes of the plant manager stared directly at me with solemn gratitude while his Kyrgyz language was translated to English.

“Many people have promised to help, but you have actually done it.”

In that moment I learned how the apostle Paul must have felt as he delivered the gifts from the Christians in Asia to the poor saints in Jerusalem. I often have this privilege of connecting the wonderful gifts given to LCMS World Relief and Human Care with recipients for whom such gifts make all the difference in the world.

took Ferguson's government grant money and disappeared without doing the repairs. In desperation, she called Lutheran Social Services of the South (LSS), which annually serves more than 35,000 people in need in Texas and Louisiana.

LSS contacted Jean and Dale Peercy, construction volunteer coordinators with Lutheran Disaster Response (LDR), who lead the repair of damaged homes for LSS and LDR.

"As soon as Jeannie and Dale came to my house, I knew everything was going to get better," Ferguson said. "They knew exactly what to say and do."

The Peercys organized volunteers who tackled repairs, including restoring the foundation and plumbing. The Ferguson home was one of 14,000 Houston-area jobs LDR volunteers expect to tackle.

LCMS World Relief provided $65,000 toward the $137,000 LDR fund for such work.

"When people ask why we come to help, that opens the door," Jean Peercy said. "We tell them the Lord has called us to be their neighbor and to care."

LDR is a cooperative program of the LCMS and the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America (ELCA) Domestic Disaster Response.

A helping hand and Gospel heart

LCMS World Relief and Human Care helps hurting and needy people throughout the world, reaching out in the clear name of Jesus and providing a clear Lutheran confession of faith. The core ministries include:

- LCMS World Relief—the Synod's disaster response and self-help arm ministers to immediate needs in emergencies and supports long-term projects in the U.S. and overseas.
- Social Ministry Organizations—liaison to Lutheran Services in America, the network of 281 Lutheran agencies (120 recognized by the LCMS) touching 5.8 million people with services such as foster care and adoption, nursing homes and hospitals, and assistance for people with disabilities. (One in three not-for-profit nursing home beds in the U.S. is provided by a Lutheran institution.)

- Districts and Congregations—providing resources and expertise for districts and congregations to identify and respond to community needs beyond church doors.
- Specialized Pastoral Care and Clinical Education (Chaplaincy)—including some 380 LCMS chaplains and pastoral care counselors in hospitals, nursing homes and police and fire departments.
- LCMS Health Ministries—promotes the wellness of body, mind and spirit for LCMS members, their families and professional church workers.
- LCMS Life Ministries—resources and advocacy for human life issues related to human cloning, abortion and euthanasia.

Also provided is funding for "Veterans of the Cross"—retired church workers and spouses who need assistance to make ends meet.

Reaching people in remote areas of Alaska is among the mission opportunities that abound in the United States. Students from Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, helped with vacation Bible school as part of their educational experiences.

Sharing the Gospel is 'job one' for LCMS World Mission

Less than two years after LCMS World Mission started a new missionary-training strategy in East Africa: 143 men are training to serve as lay missionaries, 136 “preaching stations” have opened, and 2,400 people have been baptized as new Christians.

The strategy centers around “Mission Training Centers”—mission stations, led by African Lutheran leaders, that focus on theological training, evangelism and church planting. The model has seen success in Kenya, Ethiopia and Sudan, and is being considered for several other African countries.

75 countries 300 missionaries
100 million unreached people

In Russia, Pastor Igor Alisov conducts a Baptism at a Moscow orphanage. Alisov preaches at Holy Trinity, a congregation of Evangelical Lutheran Church of Ingria in Moscow. LCMS World Mission assists the church body with leadership and theological training.

Churches emerge a decade after Iron Curtain

Barely 10 years after the fall of communism in Eastern European countries, the Missouri Synod is helping Lutheran churches there re-emerge.

For example, Synod missionaries are working with the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Ingria in Russia—an LCMS partner church—by planting churches and educating pastors and other church workers.

Rev. John Mehl, LCMS World Mission area director for Eastern Europe, said goals in Russia for the next nine years include strengthening the existing 75 congregations, planting 125 new congregations, having 400 small preaching stations and educating 1,200 church leaders.

In Kazakhstan, missionaries have planted six congregations and established a seminary in the city of Almaty, where they also are starting a mission-training center. The work in that country is expanding into villages through medical missions and Lutheran Hour radio broadcasts.

Missionaries have started a congregation in Bishkek, Kyrgyzstan, as well as in four villages of that country. Mehl said that the “hope” is to buy a building to house classes in English as a Second Language and serve as a training center for church outreach. Other goals include planting 20 more village congregations with pastors and other church leaders who can train more leaders.

In Georgia, Synod missionaries are working with the International Lutheran Laymen’s League to start churches and train pastors and church leaders there.

The Synod has made it possible for Belarusian students to study at the Ingrian church’s seminary in Russia. In Belarus, Synod missionaries have held theological-education seminars and helped LCMS World Relief with humanitarian-aid projects.

Missionaries helped Estonian Lutherans produce a Lutheran newspaper that is sold from newsstands and currently assist with an outreach program. The Estonian Evangelical Lutheran Church is the largest church in Eastern Europe.

In Latvia, the Synod is helping build Luther Academy—with a building and by preparing a theological faculty at the two LCMS seminaries.

Missionaries have helped translate material from Concordia Publishing House into Lithuanian.

Today in the Synod, there are about 160 such ministries to Hispanics, compared with 90 Hispanic ministries in 1997 and 29 in 1979, says Dr. Robert Gonzalez, mission facilitator for new Hispanic missions with LCMS World Mission—North America Services.

Among them are growing border ministries, evidenced last year when four LCMS districts and North America Services formed a partnership with the goal of connecting one million Hispanics with the Gospel and training 500 new Hispanic workers for the region that borders Mexico.

“One of our primary goals,” Gonzalez said, “is to continue to sensitize congregations to see Hispanic ministry as an opportunity, not a threat. Congregations and others that are successful in Hispanic ministry are learning to be culturally sensitive to Hispanics.”

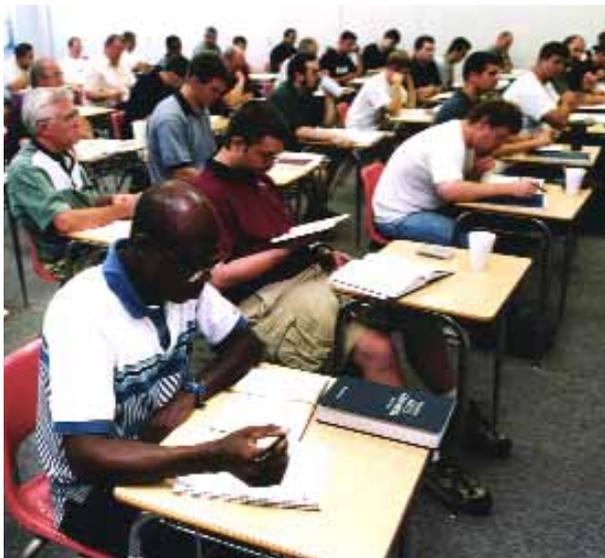

Rev. Steven Schulz, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church in Storm Lake, says he has noticed “a big change” in the cultural sensitivity of members to Hispanics since he came to the area four years ago and Brink started his work three years ago.

Within that time, Schulz said he has seen “the prevailing attitude [go from] ‘why don’t they go back to where they came from’ [to] ‘how can we help them integrate into our society and help them to know about Jesus.’” teachers to identify potential church workers for mentoring, educational experiences and connections to leadership in the church.

LCMS seminaries in St. Louis and Fort Wayne enroll 826 students. Nearly half of the first-year class at St. Louis and two thirds of the first-year class at Fort Wayne are studying to be pastors as a second career.

In the area of retention, Hempelmann said, the objective is to assist congregations in caring for their church workers. One way is to build a base of “best practices”—based on congregation experiences— for supporting church workers. Those will be shared as models throughout the Synod.

Distance learning helps fill vacancies

DELTO (Distance Education Leading To Ordination) is enabling congregations to raise up one of their laymen to provide ministry services while he studies for the pastoral ministry.

Without uprooting family or leaving jobs, about 60 men are currently enrolled in the program, which involves cooperation between districts and seminaries. Over a six-year period, students complete 30 courses leading to ordination.

“The LCMS DELTO program is a response to the extraordinary mission needs of the church,” said Hempelmann. “It provides contextual theological education leading to ordination for men who provide pastoral services to congregations in situations that cannot support a full-time pastor or missionary.

“With the revised DELTO, students can complete the first 10 courses at the district level in various ways—for example, through a district program, at a Concordia college, or even by testing out of some courses,” said Dr. Walter A. Maier III, who is dean of distance education at Concordia Theological Seminary, Fort Wayne. “The remaining 20 courses are offered by the seminaries. We’re looking at new modes of delivery, including the possibility that the seminaries may collaborate to offer courses online.”

Currently, the Fort Wayne seminary sends faculty at the beginning of a course to meet with, and teach, students grouped in regional clusters. The St. Louis seminary brings students to the campus for a week at the beginning and end of a course cycle. As students continue their studies at home, they stay in contact with professors by telephone, mail and Internet.

Funding the Mission

Sharing the love of Christ

Doing the work of your Synod has brought about a large organizational structure. In reality, some 52 not-for-profit corporations provide a variety of services in behalf of and in support of congregations. Many are described on these pages—districts, higher education, church extension and publishing, to name a few.

Complicated as it is, your Synod has one mission as described in its mission statement: “In grateful response to God’s grace and empowered by the Holy Spirit through Word and Sacraments, the mission of The Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod is vigorously to make known the love of Christ by word and deed within our churches, communities and the world.”

Through the LCMS Foundation, gifts for LCMS World Relief, such as this well-digging project in Ghana, help build self-sustaining livelihoods.

Visualize numbers in terms of people and outreach

A number like $55 million is difficult to visualize, so think of missionaries sharing the Gospel...university and seminary students assisted with educational expenses...clothing and food for tornado victims...a mission start in a rapidly growing community...classrooms for college students...a Bible study heard halfway around the globe on the Internet.

That's the sum—$55,464,207 to be exact—that was applied to LCMS ministries during the 2001–2002 fiscal year, thanks to donors who worked through the LCMS Foundation.

481 ministries 163,666 direct gifts
4,747 matured gifts $55 million distributed

Through the Lutheran Church Extension Fund, the investments of LCMS members help build churches and schools. Last year, more than 432 loans were approved for construction and remodeling projects such as this work at Zion Lutheran Church in Harvester, Mo.

Lutheran Church Extension Fund

Funds for 'space and place' for ministry

In 1902, members of several LCMS congregations pioneered “church extension” by pooling $400 to help another congregation build a church.

The tradition continues today through the Lutheran Church Extension Fund. With assets approaching $1.3 billion, LCEF counts more than 76,000 LCMS investors and some 2,700 loans in place.

LCEF includes 27 member districts in this ministry-through-investment organization. By investing in LCEF, members (individuals and congregations) receive competitive interest rates. In turn, their dollars provide low-cost loans to LCMS churches, schools, and professional church workers.

76,000 investors 2,800 current loans
$1.3 billion in assets

Between July 1, 2001 and June 30, 2002, LCEF approved loans totaling $205 million for remodeling and construction of churches, schools and ministry facilities. Loan demand is expected to exceed $220 million this year.

They have secured a home loan through the LCEF Professional Church Worker (PCW) Loan program. He learned about the program before graduating from Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, and accepting his first call as associate pastor of St. Luke Lutheran Church, Wisconsin Rapids, Wis.

“My wife and I thought the rates were very competitive compared to other financial institutions we had spoken with,” he said. “And LCEF doesn’t require private mortgage insurance, which can be a huge expense to new homeowners.”

LCEF developed the PCW program in 2000. Since then, it has approved 153 housing loans and 174 debt-consolidation loans to LCMS pastors and teachers.

'Serving Those In His Service'

When church leaders set out years ago to assist LCMS church workers, they took the model from the book of Acts, where Christians shared everything, distributing to each member what was needed. In the early 1900s, a plan was designed for churches, schools and other organizations to pool some resources and—through ongoing contributions and investments—provide pensions. The result, in 1937, was the Pension Plan for Pastors and Teachers (PPPT).

Concordia Publishing House

The Word of the Lord endures forever

Laymen founded Concordia Publishing House more than 133 years ago to provide printed materials for the worship and education needs in the Synod. Today, CPH continues to provide the "basics" like offering envelopes and bulletin covers, as well as creative, multi-piece products like the annual vacation Bible school materials. Working with LCMS boards and commissions, it cooperates on projects such as hymnals for worship and The Lutheran Witness.

In this information age, "publishing" goes beyond the traditional ink on paper. CPH products include computer software, Bible studies and newsletters via e-mail and, of course, a Web site at www.cph.org.

POSITIONS/NOMINATIONS

Concordia Publishing House, St. Louis, MO, seeks nominations for the office of president and chief executive officer to guide and direct the fulfillment of its responsibilities as the publishing arm of The Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod (Handbook Bylaw 3.301).

The president is to serve as the chief theological supervisor of Concordia Publishing House in order to implement CPH's Mission Statement, i.e., that Concordia "exists for the purpose of strengthening and aiding member congregations in their proclamation of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ and working in partnership with the agencies and congregations of the Synod to provide publishing services. On their behalf, Concordia Publishing House will develop, produce, market and distribute products and services that are faithful to the Scriptures and the Lutheran Confessions and which will effectively service such proclamation to people throughout the world."

A nominee:

- Must be a member in good standing of an LCMS congregation;
- Must be committed to the Holy Scriptures and Lutheran Confessions;
- Must be supportive of Synod's Constitution Bylaws, and policies;
- Must be mission minded and aware of CPH's opportunities to support the Great Commission of the church;
- Must be able to provide theological and administrative vision for CPH's future;
- Must have the resolve to maintain an uncompromising approach to the theological integrity of CPH publications;
- Must be eager to develop collaborative relationships with agencies of the Synod to meet their needs for publishing and information delivery services;
- Should have a minimum of a master's degree in theology (i.e., M.A.R., M.DIV., S.T.M.)
- Must be able to show a high level of knowledge and application of Lutheran theology preferably through a combination of writings, publications, editorial work, degrees, and parish experience in the LCMS;
- Should have significant administrative leadership experience in the church and/or business;
- Must possess the skills and ability to organize and monitor Concordia's business needs in
